Date of Papal address: January 9, 1980

Reflection Questions:

The Second Vatican Council teaches us in Dei Verbum, the Dogmatic Constitution on Divine Revelation, that God can be known by all with certainty simply through observation of the created reality and application of the gift of human reason. (DV 6) In other words, the hand of the Creator can be discerned in the complexity, order and beauty of creation. In what ways does creation speak to you of the Creator?

How diligently do you observe the Seventh Day in a way that “keeps it holy?” What kinds of activities do you commonly engage in that would serve as a good example in this regard for your unbelieving family, friends and neighbors? How might you do better?
